

Muthana Zouri, PhD, is a researcher and academic leader based in Ontario, Canada. He holds a PhD in Computer Science from Toronto Metropolitan University and an MSc in Statistics from the University of Baghdad. His professional experience spans senior academic leadership and teaching roles across several Canadian institutions, where he contributed to advancing innovation in higher education, digital transformation, and decision-support systems. His current research interests focus on artificial intelligence, data-driven decision-making, and the application of computational methods to healthcare and organizational management.